Dozens busted for drug deals

Thirty-one indicted on drug charges for selling in Roxbury housing development Police said sweep was timed to send message Residents of other troubled neighborhoods want police to replicate efforts there

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI

▶ Police say this area of Roxbury has been plagued by drug dealers for some time.

Authorities said they broke up an "open-air drug market" in and around a Roxbury housing project that had residents living in fear and asking police for help.

Nearly 20 suspected heroin and cocaine dealers and gang members or associates were rounded up during Tuesday night's sweep. A total of 31 people were indicted on drug charges and authorities yesterday were still trying to find the remaining fugitives.

The timing of the sweep of "impact players" was deliberate so that it coincided with the first day of summer, police Commissioner Ed Davis said. Violence typically spikes during the summer months, and police said they wanted to send a message.

"These criminals will be out of circulation for the summer because of this operation."
POLICE COMMISSIONER ED DAVIS

Authorities said residents of the Lenox Street neighborhood were accosted by drug dealers. Davis recalled a conversation with a lieutenant who told him about a woman who said she couldn't leave her house without being harassed.

"The phrase open-air drug market has become cliche, but it's no exaggeration to describe what has gone on there," said Suffolk District Attorney Daniel Conley.

Those arrested range in age from 20 to 55 years old.

Police conducted a similar sweep last fall in a nearby South End neighborhood that targeted a dozen people for drug dealing. Davis said this group of people stepped up to "fill the gap" left by dealers arrested last year.

While authorities hailed the sweep as a success, people in other neighborhoods of the city where shootings have recently occurred said they would welcome more police presence.

"Customers come in and they talk about how more police are needed here," said Hayden Wattley, who works at a Blue Hill Avenue business near where multiple fatal shootings have occurred this year.

Davis said police move their operations and investigations with shooting activity throughout the city.

Garage plans get new life

BOSTON. Plans to transform the Government Center Garage into a massive office, hotel, retail and residential complex have been revived.

HYM Investment Group filed with the city to revamp the 11-story garage to enliven the connection of Boston's surrounding neighborhoods.

The project, sitting at Congress Street and the Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy Greenway, will remove the garage in stages to ensure that parking remains available. No start date has been set for construction.

Shhh! Quiet Cars to begin

BOSTON. Starting June 27, the Commuter Rail will permanently roll out quiet cars on all peak-hour trains.

A 90-day trial of the quiet cars started in January on limited lines.

Positive customer feedback about the silent services prompted an initiative to offer them in all rush-hour rides.

The car closest to the locomotive will be designated the quiet car.

While on board, all electronics need to be on vibrate and phone calls are not permitted. METRO

Punches are thrown to knock out cancer

- Boxing event pits amateurs against each another for cancer research
- Tonight's fighters include a lawyer, school principal and firefighter

Tonight, 30-year-old Amy Dee will more than likely get punched in the face.

And that's why the Brighton bartender and Tufts University administrative assistant has been able to raise about $2,400.

"People are saying they will give me money if I'm willing to get punched in the face," Dee said.

Dee is one of 28 amateur boxers set to step into the boxing ring tonight and fight in the Haymakers for Hope charity event.

The event at the Park Plaza Castle features 14 fights. Fighters in 12 of those have never before stepped into the ring during an event, said co-founder Andrew Myerson.

Their day jobs range from middle school principal and lawyer to firefighter and equities trader.

Myerson, of Dover, and friend Julie Anne Kelly, of Dedham, came up with the idea for the event last year. The pair met while boxing in New York City and he found out that she was a cancer survivor.

The two of them fought last year and raised money, but this year wanted to create an event that more people could join.

"We [know] not a lot of people watch professional boxing anymore, but we really think that there are a lot of people out there who love boxing as a way of training," Myerson said. "We wanted to promote boxing in a good light, as opposed to fighting, and help cancer research."

Finding fighters:

- Organizers put up fliers in various gyms around Boston and recruited amateur boxers with little or no experience.
- Local gyms teamed up with the charity and gave the fighters free training for about three months before tonight's event.
- The fighters range in age from 23 to 57.

$155K

The event has raised well over organizers' goal of $100,000, they said. The money will be donated to the Jimmy Fund, which supports the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Hub breaks ground on groundbreaking project

Gov. Deval Patrick said Mayor Thomas Menino couldn't stop singing in his seat as he prepared to announce the groundbreaking of the largest private-sector construction project in the United States yesterday, right here in Boston.

Represenatives from Boston-based development firm The Fallon Company joined Menino and Patrick to break ground on office buildings at South Boston's Fan Pier.

The project, the largest commercial lease in the Hub's history, will be the global headquarters for Vertex Pharmaceuticals Inc.

The vision is part of Menino's "Innovation District" overhaul in the harbor area to attract new businesses and create jobs.

"People said it would never get done," said Menino. "This is a catalyst for other businesses to come down here and work together."

The project includes two office buildings at a combined 1.1 million square feet on the property and should be finished by 2013.

Developer Joe Fallon said the project would be like having one tenant in the Prudential Building.

The buildings will be 18 stories high and have 60,000 square feet of retail and restaurant space on the ground floor, as well as underground parking.

Sisters plead for rundown sibling

With tears in her eyes, Azzy Amanuel asked the person who ran down her 23-year-old sister in a Roxbury street last weekend to come forward.

"You can't hide forever," she said. "It's better for you to give up."

Her sister, Salem Amanuel, of Cambridge, was crossing the street at Massachusetts Avenue and Shirley Street when she was hit about 3 a.m. Saturday. The driver didn't stop.

Amanuel was an aspiring doctor and recently graduated from George Washington University. She was slated to start working in administration at Children's Hospital Boston this week. Instead, she's in a medically induced coma at Boston Medical Center.

"He just hit a body in his eyes, but she's our sister," said a tearful Helen Amanuel, Salem's younger sister.

Amanuel was with friends and crossing the street to use the bathroom at a nearby eatery, police said.

Police are looking for a gray or silver Chevy Impala with a spoiler on the rear. The car sustained front-end damage to the passenger side and could be in a repair shop.

What's next for Rowling?

LONDON. Harry Potter creator J.K. Rowling will unveil her latest venture involving the boy wizard today, ending fevered speculation among fans about what comes next.

Having announced a new website (www.pottermore.com), the British author has kept its contents a closely guarded secret.

A countdown clock linked to the website indicates it will go live at 7 a.m. ET.

Rowling's publicist has already made clear that the next step would not involve a new book. REUTERS

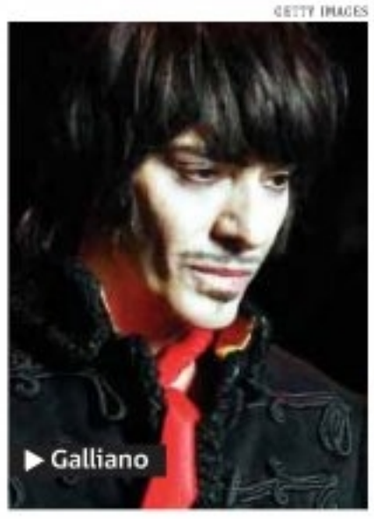
Designer blames outburst on vices

- Anti-Semitism trial sees John Galliano blaming booze and drugs
- Fashion designer doesn't remember hurling insults at Paris cafe

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Galliano

Fashion designer John Galliano told a Paris court yesterday that he was so out of control on drugs and alcohol he does not recall hurling anti-Semitic insults at strangers in a bar earlier this year.

Galliano arrived in a hushed courtroom wearing long sandy hair, his trademark razor-thin mustache and leather trousers, prepared to defend himself against charges of anti-Semitic behavior.

He stood as a judge read out charges against him and repeated statements he allegedly made in an incident in a Paris cafe on Feb. 24, including "dirty Jewish face" and "f—ing ugly Jewish b—."

Asked whether he remembered the insults, Galliano said: "I don't remember very well. ... I have no recollection."

"I have a triple addiction," he added. "Alcohol, sleeping pills and Valium."

Galliano's career is in tatters. He was fired from fashion house Dior in March, after a video online showed him drunkenly telling a woman he loved Hitler and saying her parents might have been gassed in a Nazi death camp.

Magistrates are expected to arrive at a decision quickly in the trial, which pits Galliano, 50, against two accusers — a woman who claimed not to have heard of him before their February encounter and another whose accusations refer back to events last October. REUTERS

If he's guilty

If found guilty, Galliano faces a six-month jail sentence and a fine of up to 22,000 euros ($31,517). Precedents in similar cases suggests that a more likely outcome is a smaller fine — a few thousand euros at most.

Obama: Bring them home

President Barack Obama announced yesterday a plan to start bringing U.S. troops home from Afghanistan in a significant first step toward ending the long, costly Afghan war.

In a televised address, Obama said he would pull 10,000 troops from Afghanistan by year's end, followed by about 23,000 more by the end of next summer.

Troops will be withdrawn at a steady pace after that, Obama said, as the United States, struggling to repair its global image and fix its weak domestic economy, looks to end a decade of military ventures prompted by the Sept. 11 attacks in 2001.

"Huge challenges remain. This is the beginning — but not the end of our effort to wind down this war," Obama said. "America, it is time to focus on nation building at home."

News that Obama will pull the entire 'surge' force he sent to Afghanistan in 2010 caps weeks of speculation about the future of U.S. involvement there and could increase friction between Obama and military advisors who have warned about the perils of a hasty drawdown. REUTERS

On the ground, nothing is different

U.S. Lt. Jonathan Austin's men spent yesterday as they expect to spend the better part of a year — patrolling grape orchards in the blazing desert sun, scrambling over mud walls and scanning the paths of Chariagen village for homemade bombs.

Word had not filtered down to their outpost in southern Afghanistan's Kandahar province that President Barack Obama was to announce his plans for starting to bring home U.S. troops.

For the men charged with the tough daily grind of fighting on the frontline of the near decade-long war in Afghanistan, the big decision will have little impact.

"It won't change our job any," Austin said with a shrug. "We've still got a year of fighting here." REUTERS

Text skills impaired by Botox

Are you a typical American teenager who sends more than 1,000 text messages each month? If so, Botox might impair your communication prowess, suggests a new report of a 17-year-old who had the treatment for an excessive sweating condition.

Doctors who use Botox said it's not entirely unexpected, since the injections have been linked to muscle weakness.

"I would definitely discuss this with my patients going forward as a specific potential side effect," said Dr. Julia Lehman from the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota, who treated the teenager.

Lehman's patient had a condition called hyperhidrosis, which causes a person to sweat much more than normal — usually on their palms, the soles of their feet or under their arms. Her patient suffered from the excessive sweating on her hands for a few years.

Botox contains a chemical that blocks the signal that releases sweat, Lehman explained. But it also relaxes other muscles not related to sweating.

A week after Botox, the patient sweated much less, but her texting skills had decreased as well, Lehman reported in the Archives of Dermatology. REUTERS

Riders Alert!

When MBTA Management took the second operator off Orange Line Trains they committed to having T personnel on station platforms and to add staff to monitor passenger safety, make sure doors closed correctly and deal with Homeland Security concerns. But the T has failed to meet that commitment to T riders.

Now MBTA management is planning to take the second operator off Red Line Trains and they are proposing the same failed passenger and security plan they tried on the Orange line. Homeland Security told T riders to speak out when we saw safety concerns. Now is the time to speak out against the T's Orange and Red Line safety and security failures.

As passengers and fare-payers you need to demand that budget cuts don't threaten your safety.

With everything from continued terror threats on public transportation to late night violent crime, passengers need guards to spot dangerous packages left in the back of a group of MBTA train cars or to take action when criminals target riders late in the evening.

▶ Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or less.

Today, Jessica Simpson is pretty satisfied, Anderson Cooper is experiencing technical difficulties, Joan Rivers is looking for a handout and Conan O'Brien is full of ideas.

▶ @JessicaSimpson
I love God's plan for my life. #grateful

▶ @andersoncooper
A lot of behind the scenes drama on the show. Computers are crashing, and it sounds like the control room is in meltdown. Oh well.

▶ @Joan_Rivers
So excited! I'm off to have dinner tonight with Judge Judy! Do you think it's rude if I bring some of my parking tickets for her to "fix"?

George Clooney: Single again

▶ Send in your best sales pitch to woo Clooney:
▶ dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Another one bites the dust: Elisabetta Canalis is now the latest name in the very long list of George Clooney's ex-girlfriends.

"We are not together anymore. It's very difficult and very personal, and we hope everyone can respect our privacy," Clooney and Canalis said in a joint statement yesterday. Added her publicist: "It is a very personal and sad matter, and Elisabetta wants it to remain that way. She will be taking some time ... and then will face the press. She has not authorized me to say when the split happened."

I know Clooney is one of the biggest actors on the planet, but is a joint press statement about their split really necessary? They dated for two years; it's not the signing of a war treaty or anything. And, really? "Respect their privacy"? Why do stars always say that — when have the media or the public ever "respected their privacy"? We'd look at pictures of them on the toilet without a second thought.

However, I digress, and am forgetting about the most important thing: George Clooney is single again. Hallelujah! Once he gets over this "difficult" time (read: five minutes), who do you think he should date next? If it's you, why don't you send in your best sales pitch to woo Clooney, and I'll reprint them here. Mine would be: "I, like you, have a giant head, an insider knowledge of the celebrity world you inhabit, loved 'Batman & Robin' even though no one else did and use salt and pepper on everything, in honor of you."

'Mad Men,' mad money

It was announced yesterday that "Mad Men" star Jon Hamm signed an eight-figure deal for three more years of the hit AMC show. And since the show's creator, Matthew Weiner, recently locked down a similar deal, we'll have a few more seasons of looking at that delicious mug of his.

And on the other end of the pay-raise spectrum, it was disclosed that Donald Trump is raking in $65 million a year on "Celebrity Apprentice," making him the highest paid reality star. No wonder he didn't want to run for president.

We'd be smiling too.

Talking points

Arnold pays up to Maria

They may not have initiated divorce proceedings yet, but Arnold Schwarzenegger is reportedly already paying Maria Shriver "a significant amount of child support," according to Radar Online. "Even though Maria is a Kennedy, and has inherited a great deal of money from her parents' estate since their deaths, she is taking the child support," a source says. As for the divorce itself, the source says it's just a matter of time: "Maria wants to get a fair divorce settlement, and move on with her life," the source says. "It would surprise people how gracious Maria is being about the entire situation. Maria doesn't want the kids to suffer because of stupid decisions their father made."

Harry and Pippa hang out

While their siblings enjoy being newlyweds, Prince Harry and Pippa Middleton have reportedly been spending some quality time together, according to Grazia. "They speak on the phone all the time and have met up at least five times since the wedding, once for tea at his Clarence House apartments," a source says. "She thinks he's got a really cheeky sense of humor." The pair have something else in common as well, as they're both recently single. "He only recently came out of a relationship, of course. He's been trying to cheer Pippa up," the source says.

A boy for January Jones?

If her shopping interests are any indication, January Jones is expecting a boy. The pregnant actress was spotted out in L.A. picking through baby clothes — all in the color blue, according to Just Jared. Despite rumors and speculation, the "Mad Men" star has still kept mum on the baby's father's identity. "She's really looking forward to this new chapter in her life as a single mom," her rep said when Jones' pregnancy was announced.

Billy Ray likes Miley's boyfriend a lot

Miley Cyrus is back together with boyfriend Liam Hemsworth, and her dad, Billy Ray Cyrus, couldn't be happier. "He's a great guy. He's solid. He's got great character," Billy Ray tells E! Online. "And I have to tell you, on or off the record, he's just a good guy. He's just a really good guy. I really like him a lot." Last week, Miley's brother Trace confirmed the couple was once again dating, telling Us Weekly that he and Hemsworth are "homies."

▶ "Cars 2" also features the voices of Sir Michael Caine and Joe Mantegna.

2 'Bad Teacher' "Bad Teacher," "Horrible Bosses" ... apparently we're having a bit of an employment crisis in Hollywood. This one stars Cameron Diaz as a lazy junior high teacher who decides to get her act together in order to woo a hot new colleague (Justin Timberlake).

3 'Conan O'Brien Can't Stop' If you're not sick of Conan O'Brien making jokes about last year's Late Night drama on NBC, then you need to see this no-holds-barred account of the comedy tour he went on once he lost his "Tonight Show" spot to Jay Leno.

4 'Green Lantern' Ryan Reynolds saving lives in a skintight suit? Yes, we'll take it, thanks. This comic book adaptation celebrates one of the less notable superheroes, but with the support of co-stars Blake Lively and Peter Sarsgaard, this "Lantern" won't go dim — or will it?

5 'Mr. Popper's Penguins' Jim Carrey, as a somewhat self-absorbed dad, is forced to rethink his priorities once he inherits six penguins. And no, they don't talk. METRO

Must-see

1 'Cars 2' Pixar presents what might be the biggest animated release of summer. Owen Wilson and Larry the Cable Guy return to voice Lightning McQueen and Mater, respectively, as they head to the World Grand Prix race.

▶ Beady Eye play New York City tonight and Philadelphia on Saturday. Is it worth the road trip? That's for you to decide, since there's no guarantee they'll play "Champagne Supernova."

Standing on the shoulders of giants

You may recognize members of Beady Eye from Oasis, but don't expect them to rest on the laurels of that band

Beady Eye sees the former members of Oasis, including frontman Liam Gallagher, but minus brother Noel, downsizing tours and playing smaller venues. Guitarist Gem Archer says forging ahead with this new band has upped their game.

"It's weird, man," he says, "because I think a lot more bands should split up." Known for the sibling rivalry of the brothers Gallagher as much as their melodic Brit-pop hits, Oasis suddenly — though not too surprisingly — split in 2009.

As Archer considers the quote he just provided, he laughs at how it could be taken as typically acerbic for these Brit-pop vets.

"I mean as an exercise," he adds. "Imagine if every band said, 'Look, for the next tour we're going to do all the new songs and only stick in three or four [old ones].'"

This is Beady Eye's challenge. Though they look and sound familiar, they don't want to rest on old laurels and play Oasis hits on this first world tour — which includes only a handful of U.S. dates and a promise to return for more before the end of the year.

"It was a bit of a mindf— to sort of go, 'This is all we've got,'" Archer says of the band's debut, "Different Gear, Still Speeding," which was released in February. "It raises your game."

Do 'Wonderwall'!

Inevitably, Beady Eye have plenty of Oasis fans in their audiences. Metro asked Gem which of the Brit-pop giant's songs do audiences yell requests for?

▶ "We haven't had one," says Archer. "That said, we take every gig as it comes. But, so far, everyone's bought in really quickly to it. And been really respectful. Because we've been clear about it. We haven't been dabbling around saying we are going to play old songs. We've drawn the line and stepped over it. If people want to come along with us, all the better for them."

Provincetown motel transitions into nightlife destination Whaler's Lounge is a whale of a good time

A view with a room

Picture Cape Cod Bay, dappled in blues and grays and merging with a sky etched with delicate clouds. Nature's scheme is hard to beat. But if you can't beat 'em, join 'em. This is the approach of the Whaler's Lounge.

Tucked away from Provincetown's west end bustle, the Whaler offers this rapturous vista of sea, sky and varying amounts of golden sand depending on the tide. It's peaceful, mostly. Come weekend nights and high season, this newly opened spot in the Harbor Hotel, formerly the Cape Inn (and really a motel) is poised to pick up some of Ptown's fabled devil-may-care downtown nightlife.

The Whaler is split into a gorgeous outdoor deck with lounge seating, an indoor airy cafe with floor-to-ceiling windows that disappear in clement weather, a low-lit bar at the back and a sun-soaked fire pit with Adirondack chairs. From 4 p.m. on weekends and 5 p.m. during the week, an ambitious menu offers plump lobster sliders ($14) with tarragon and mayonnaise and wild mushroom ravioli ($14) with roasted tomatoes. There are peppery jumbo lump crab cakes ($11) with a creamy apple and horseradish remoulade and oysters Rockefeller ($14), named for their rich filling — rich enough for a Rockefeller — of spinach, cream and a sprinkling of fresh Parmesan cheese, offset by a subtle aniseed flavor from a touch of Pernod. There are sandwiches, salads, sorbets, ice creams — and a divine Godiva chocolate cheesecake ($8), too.

And as for that view: It never gets old.

'Being able to disappear for a while'

Owl City singer Adam Young on finding Neverland within ◐ He really does seem like the hopeful guy in his songs

The sense of childlike wonder evident in Owl City's songs is no act. Finding inspiration in nature and children's movies, singer-songwriter Adam Young conveys a naivete in "All Things Bright and Beautiful," not unlike the persona of his 2009 breakthrough hit, "Fireflies."

"I can't really watch even an R-rated movie without feeling dirty and stuff," says Young. "I always kind of cringe when people cuss, and use the F-word."

Young says he hopes his lighthearted tunes inspire optimism in those that hear them.

"Everything I do musically, I always want to keep that pristine and kind of pure in that respect, because there is so much negative out there," he says.

If Young's major label debut was Postal Service 2.0, his new album, "Bright and Beautiful," is Postal Service 2.5. With a more refined sound, and more collaborating artists, his latest release is full of optimism and imagination, apparent in titles like "Dreams Don't Turn to Dust" and "How I Became the Sea."

Growing up in a small town in southern Minnesota as an only child, Young credits his success to his "idealist escapist" imagination. Much like a 5-year-old playing make-believe, Young envisions scenic escapes from daily life.

"I just like the idea of being able to disappear for a while," he says, "where you can be anybody, where you can go anywhere, and you can do anything and it's this perfect, beautiful place."

JESS LUCERO
letters@metro.us

'Make myself believe'

Owl City's new album features a family-friendly rap from Shawn Chrystopher and a female singer dubbed Lights accompanying Young. While proud of the collaborations, there is at least one other artist still on his wish list.

The "Fireflies" singer gushes about Angels & Airwaves vocalist and guitarist, Tom DeLonge, describing his love for the artist as a "reverent respect."

"Every guy my age was into Blink 182 ... but I'd never ask him [to jam for fear that] he'd say no."

Tom, if you're reading, you've got a fan.

Damian Abraham

To listen on record to this Canadian band whose full name we cannot print in this newspaper, you might not expect the hulking confrontational presence of frontman Damian Abraham. He is like a jumbo GG Allin in appearance and stage antics, and the band has basically redefined what can be considered hardcore punk. Steel Pulse is one of England's most lauded reggae acts. Formed in Birmingham in the mid-'70s, they were known equally for their rootsy music and their strongly political Rastafarian stances. They had a satirical sense of humor, often mockingly dressing up as authoritarian British figures on stage, which surely helped win them over to the similarly radical burgeoning punk movement. METRO

For all the single ladies

RE: 'THE LOWDOWN ON THE HOOK-UP,' 6/23: I'm annoyed that Mr. Alpert assumes most women "want a guy who says, 'You are the one I want, and I'm willing to do anything to make that happen.'" Flattering, but I'm also a single woman who doesn't desire a serious relationship and who has (gasp!) sexual needs. More women today are developing their careers before settling down. That's not to say we're suddenly celibate. Mr. Alpert should limit his short-sighted advice to fellow Quakers.
JENNIFER BELLENOIT, VIA E-MAIL

Gay rights, a la mode

Do you honestly believe this world was set up to be tiered into levels of equality? Say I set up an ice-cream station with rainbow sprinkles and I gave the person next to you some, but not everybody else. And let's say everyone else loves rainbow sprinkles. Wouldn't you feel disenfranchised? You'd ask why and I'd say it's the mainstream view that you should not have sprinkles. You'd look at me in disbelief. After reading several anti-gay marriage letters, this is how I felt. This is bigger than ice cream. Ice cream slowly melts, but inequality takes longer.
RYAN COONEY, VIA E-MAIL

RE: The road to Gomorrah?

According to David DiBello, the ability to procreate makes heterosexuals superior to homosexuals. Well, the average housefly can have thousands of babies in two weeks. Does that make them superior to heterosexual humans?
AMY LEWIS, VIA E-MAIL

I wonder how infertile straight couples fit on Mr. DiBello's equality scale? Would he deny them the right to marry? I don't believe he would. That is a double standard. Marriage between two loving consenting adults should be a right for all.
CHRISTOPHER M. LEONARD, VIA E-MAIL

The old saying, if it's broke ...

Longevity alone doesn't qualify the old, broken method a "tradition." Let open-minded people improve society and the institution of marriage. If the divorce rate is any indication of the troubles already plaguing the heterosexual institution of marriage, it is only about half as "sacred" as it could be — unless "till death do us part" isn't a part of the tradition anymore?

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Under no circumstances should you permit an outsider to become involved in your personal family disagreements.
♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Regardless of any strong inclinations you may get to respond to some fiery comments made by another, be above it all. You'll be far more effective by ignoring what was said.
♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Because your sales resistance tends to be a bit lower than usual, be aware of your weakness and keep your purse strings tight.
♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. A serious argument could erupt between you and your mate if you allow a subject to surface about which you have divergent opinions. Keep a lid on what you can't resolve.
♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. The ineptness of an interfering busybody could create problems for you. Be kind to others, but not to the point of allowing just anybody to stick their snoots in your business.
♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. An acquaintance with a chip on his or her shoulder could cause a nasty scene if you're not careful. Don't do anything to antagonize this person.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Being an assertive person can have both good and bad results, depending on how you use that quality. Take care that you don't come off as being bossy to others.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. If you're not careful you could easily overreact to someone's opposing viewpoint. You know better than most that everyone is entitled to his or her own opinion.
♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Ensure no one makes a financial commitment on your behalf without your consent, or it could cost you a pretty penny. You don't want to pay for another's mistake.
♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Choose a partner wisely so that you don't get involved with someone who doesn't appreciate the value of teamwork. If you spot any hint of self-serving ways, go it alone.
♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Instead of making light of life as usual, you may tend to take everything far too seriously. Start looking for problems and you'll find them.

LAWRENCE BONK
LAWRENCE.BONK@METRO.US

Nineties nostalgia is in full swing. Bands like Pavement and Guided By Voices are back for another go-around. TV shows like "Beavis and Butthead" and "120 Minutes" are prepped for a return. Heck, even Newt Gingrich has once again plastered his ugly mug all over the airwaves. Nintendo has joined the fray with the 3-D remake of 1998's "The Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time," a game so good you are likely to lapse into a nostalgia-induced seizure.

First, the game itself. "Ocarina of Time" was widely recognized as one the best adventure games ever made. It still is. The gameplay is so timeless that it does more than hold up, it surpasses most modern releases. For the uninitiated, the game has you embarking on an epic time-spanning quest. This game shows off the "Zelda formula" in spades, which includes that perfect mix of puzzle-solving and combat.

This version straddles the line between remake and reimagining. The game was rebuilt from the ground up and looks stunning, particularly in 3-D. The gameplay remains untouched, aside from much-needed touch-screen integration. This version also includes some bonus content, including a second quest that repurposes much of the content. You are likely to get 40 hours of play out of this.

The 3DS is a great portable device that simply hasn't had any system-selling software. That drought is now over. "Ocarina of Time" is the perfect title to show what the system is capable of. The graphics look just about GameCube level and the gameplay is as great as you remember it. This remake practically oozes love and respect for the source material.

NBA MOCK DRAFT

Metro has the scoop on who's going where in tonight's lottery round (7, ESPN) Cleveland will start fresh with Irving Three point guards in our Top 5 Jimmer heads to Salt Lake

1 CLEVELAND
Kyrie Irving, PG, Duke —

The Good: Point guards are the new centers in today's NBA. And you really can't compete for a title without an elite one.
The Bad: Irving may not even be the best at his position in this draft.

2 MINNESOTA
Derrick Williams
SF/PF, Arizona
The Good: Best player on our board, and would form an unstoppable 1-2 punch with fellow man-child Kevin Love.
The Bad: Might not be here at No. 2 — if CLE can erase the memory of the last time they built around a 6-8 forward.

3 UTAH
Brandon Knight
PG, Kansas
The Good: John Calipari-educated point guards are quick studies — just look at John Wall for proof.
The Bad: His athleticism is off the charts, but still needs to work on an outside shot and limiting turnovers.

4 CLEVELAND
Enes Kanter
C, Kentucky
The Good: We're not saying he's Dirk Nowitzki ... but a 6-foot-11 big man that can hit a 20-footer is hip right now.
The Bad: He hasn't played organized basketball in two years, and the 19-year-old is already fighting back issues.

5 TORONTO
Kemba Walker
PG, UConn
The Good: Throw out the measurables and watch his NCAA tournament highlight reel.
The Bad: Can a 6-foot-1 point guard be the face of your franchise — in other words, how many NBA championships did Allen Iverson win?

6 WASHINGTON
Jonas Valanciunas
C, Lithuania
The Good: Probably the most talented big man in this draft — with a 7-foot-4 wingspan.
The Bad: He has $2.5 million buyout on his contract with Lithuanian powerhouse Lietuvos Rytas.

7 SACRAMENTO
Kawhi Leonard
SF, San Diego St.
The Good: Leonard fills an immediate need at shooting forward and his grit is drawing comparisons to Ron Artest.
The Bad: Kings really want a point guard — does Kemba Walker slip? — that they can pair with Tyreke Evans.

8 DETROIT
Jan Vesely
SF/PF, Czech
The Good: "Dunking Ninja" (Google it!) considered NBA-ready and Pistons will need to replace Tayshaun Prince.
The Bad: Questions abound about whether he can create his own shot and hold on to the basketball.

9 CHARLOTTE
Tristan Thompson
PF, Texas
The Good: Could be another Ben Wallace: fierce rebounder, aggressive defender.
The Bad: Could be another Ben Wallace: can't score, terrible foul shooter.

10 MILWAUKEE
Marcus Morris
PF, Kansas
The Good: Dual threat at power forward/small forward due to ball-handling skills.
The Bad: If they want to use him as a true power forward, he's a bit undersized weighing in at just 230 pounds.

11 GOLDEN STATE
Klay Thompson
SG/SF, Washington State
The Good: He can fill the huge scoring void likely left when Monta Ellis is shipped out.
The Bad: Thompson is built in the Steph Curry image — but there's only room for one Steph Curry on the roster.

12 UTAH
Jimmer Fredette
SG, BYU
The Good: "The Jimmer Show" plays before live studio audiences every night in Mormon-friendly Salt Lake.
The Bad: Is Jimmer the next Larry Bird? Or the next JJ Redick? We'll take the former.

13 PHOENIX
Alec Burks
SG, Colorado
The Good: After a potential Steve Nash deal fell through, the Suns grab a solid two guard to pair with him.
The Bad: The Suns still don't have a replacement for Nash when he finally retires.

14 HOUSTON
Jordan Hamilton
SF/SG, Texas
The Good: Instantly improves Houston's suspect wing rotation, giving them a player with a legit outside shot.
The Bad: Riding accolades after breakout sophomore year — 18.6 points per game — but was he a one-hit wonder?

In the NHL

One more trophy

The Bruins brought home more hardware last night. Tim Thomas was awarded the Vezina Trophy at the NHL's awards show in Las Vegas. Zdeno Chara was nominated for the Norris Trophy, which went to Nicklas Lidstrom of Detroit. METRO

Woods to skip own tourney

Tiger Woods will not play in the AT&T National next weekend outside Philadelphia.

It's "doctor's orders," Woods tweeted yesterday, that he will miss the tilt, which benefits his Tiger Woods Foundation. METRO

Don't expect much from the Celts' pick

It's been a few years since the Celtics had this much time to prepare for the NBA draft.

Unfortunately for them, it's not a very deep one. But that hasn't stopped team president Danny Ainge from scouting the many players who can help the C's in some way, shape or form in the future.

"When we're drafting, where we're drafting — I'm not trying to put a negative spin on this, I'm trying to be realistic — the 25th pick in the draft probably is not going to help us immediately," Ainge said yesterday. "But there are some players that we think can fill our roster, that can fit in with the personality of our team, that have a work ethic that can make our team better in practice, that can just add depth to our roster."

Last season, the C's took Avery Bradley with the 18th pick in the draft. Bradley didn't find the court much in his rookie campaign — and the same will probably be said for whoever the team drafts at No. 25 tonight.

One thing Boston won't do is draft a big guy simply because he's a big guy. Historically speaking, there's not a lot of tall talent later in the draft.

"If size is available at the 25th pick, I don't know if that's a good sign or a bad sign," Doc Rivers said, jokingly. "But sometimes you can get lucky. Danny, I've said it for years, if there's a guy there that can play, he'll know it."

Three options

Metro's top three choices for who the Celtics should take with the 25th overall pick in tonight's draft:

- Justin Harper (PF, Richmond)
- Jeremy Tyler (C, Japan)
- Marshon Brooks (SG, Providence)

The Celtics could land Justin Harper (32) at No. 25.

▶ Iman Shumpert has likely played himself into the top 20.

Rising, falling at the draft

Players' stock changes rapidly in leadup to event We pick three winners and three losers so far

Risers

Iman Shumpert, PG, Georgia Tech
Why? He floored everyone at the draft combine. Shumpert is a 6-foot-6, 222-pound PG who had the highest vertical jump and did the second-most reps on the bench press. He's a physical specimen teams are salivating over.

Chris Singleton, SF, Florida State
Why? Defense. Singleton's offensive game is really raw, but he can guard at least three positions at the NBA level right now.

Klay Thompson, SG, Washington State
Why? He's been compared favorably to Reggie Miller thanks to his skinny frame and shooting ability. He'll make plenty of 3s right out of the gate.

Fallers

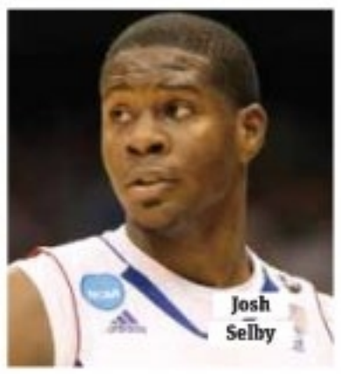
Jonas Valanciunas, C, Lithuania
Why? Word broke this week that he won't be coming to the NBA for at least one more season. That sent him from a likely top-five pick to a borderline lottery selection.

Reggie Jackson, PG, Boston College
Why? Jackson wasn't able to work out for teams, likely due to an offseason knee procedure. He has top-18 talent, but medical red flags are flying.

Jon Leuer, PF, Wisconsin
Why? Leuer was one of the best shooters and scorers in the country last season. But can he do it with NBA-level defenders on him? Workouts have said no.

ADAM LEVITAN

Draft sleepers



Keep an eye out for these three talented — and often overlooked — players at tonight's event.

1 Josh Selby, PG, Kansas. Selby was the No. 1 high school player in the country just two years ago. NCAA discipline and a foot injury are the only reasons he's not a lottery pick. Huge upside.

2 Nikola Mirotic, SF, Montenegro/Spain. Mirotic has a tricky buyout with Spanish club Real Madrid that will likely keep him overseas for at least two more seasons. But the 6-foot-10, 225-pound beast's extreme talent is worth a long-term stash for a team picking outside the lottery.

3 Jeremy Tyler, C, Japan. Tyler skipped his senior year of high school to play overseas. Now he's finally eligible for the draft. At 6-foot-11, 263 pounds, there's big potential here. But he'll need to do a lot better than he did in the Israeli and Japanese pro leagues to justify a high selection. AL/METRO

Lackey, San Diego sink Boston in rain

Red Sox drop series finale vs. Padres Another mediocre outing from Lackey Team has off today

The Red Sox's strength in day games couldn't overcome the weakness that is John Lackey.

The high-priced starter surrendered five runs in 3 1/3 innings yesterday as Boston dropped a rainy series finale to San Diego, 5-1, at Fenway Park.

The game was delayed four times before finally being called after 7 1/3 innings.

▶ Lackey

The Sox (44-31) had won 17 of their first 23 day games this season. But the Padres jumped all over them yesterday — Will Venable led off the game with a home run, and San Diego plated four more in the top of the fourth.

Adrian Gonzalez went 4-for-4 against his old team, raising his average to .359. Dustin Pedroia and Kevin Youkilis collected two hits apiece in the losing effort.

The Sox bullpen pitched 4 2/3 scoreless innings.

Another final for Yanks

Former New England Revolution star Clint Dempsey scored in the 77th minute last night, lifting the U.S. men's national soccer team to a 1-0 win over Panama in the Gold Cup semifinals. It's the Americans' fourth straight berth in the final. METRO

Another easy win for Nadal at Wimby

Rafael Nadal seems like he's on his way to yet another Wimbledon title.

The Spanish world No. 1, who hasn't been beaten at the All England Club since 2007, battered American Ryan Sweeting, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4, under Centre Court's retractable roof yesterday.

"[Playing under the roof] was a new experience for me; a good experience," Nadal said of the second-round match. "But the tournament is outdoor, not indoor, and I prefer to play outdoor."

Eighth-seeded Andy Roddick also won his second-round match yesterday, beating Victor Hanescu. METRO

PREDICTING THE DEADLINE

Fantasy sports

ADAM LEVITAN
ALEVITAN@METRO.US

In five weeks, baseball's annual hot stove will heat up once again. In the process, some of the biggest names in the big leagues will see their fantasy values impacted.

Figuring out who might be moved is vital. We can dump players who figure to lose playing time and add setup men who are going to become closers. Here are three situations to monitor.

No way, Jose

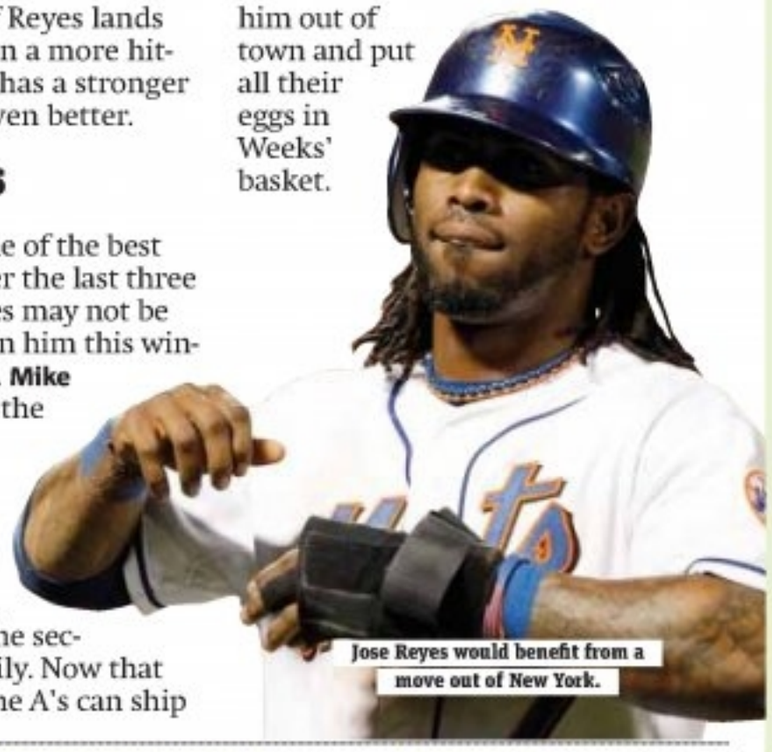
Jose Reyes said this week that he won't negotiate a new contract with the Mets until after the season. Considering the state of the team, it appears unlikely they'll retain the impending free agent. If Reyes lands on a team that plays in a more hitter-friendly park and has a stronger lineup, he could be even better.

The Bell tolls

Heath Bell has been one of the best closers in baseball over the last three seasons. But the Padres may not be able to afford to re-sign him this winter, so a trade is likely. Mike Adams would become the Padres' closer.

Little Rickie

Jemile Weeks, Rickie's brother, is playing well enough to hold the second base job down daily. Now that Mark Ellis is healthy, the A's can ship him out of town and put all their eggs in Weeks' basket.



Jose Reyes would benefit from a move out of New York.

NFL news

Clear head

Percy Harvin said doctors found some things in his neck this summer that they believe caused his crippling migraines. Now Harvin says he feels as good as he has since kindergarten. If he can sustain health, he's an elite playmaker.

Dayan Viciedo
3B, White Sox
The best prospect that hasn't been called up yet. Once Viciedo is promoted, he'll play regularly.

Dustin Ackley
2B, Mariners
The No. 2 overall pick in the 2009 draft is up and manning the thin second base spot. Real power.

Jon Jay
OF, Cardinals
Thanks to Albert Pujols' injury and Lance Berkman's move to first base, Jay is getting to play every day.

NFL free agency

Here are three studs likely to change teams once the lockout ends:

1
DeAngelo Williams, RB, CAR — There's no need to break the bank on Williams with Jonathan Stewart ready to go. Stewart has top 10 fantasy upside.

2
Sidney Rice, WR, MIN — Has the tools to be a true No. 1 receiver anywhere he goes. Hip isn't a concern.

3
James Jones, WR, GB — Jones will leave for starter's money, but he won't find the grass greener. No Aaron Rodgers is devastating.
